

Your Closet

First - Happy Fall 2007!

Since for many the weather is rapidly changing, I decided to revisit the closet discussion.

Nowadays lots of folks don't do the summer/winter clothes thing... rather leaving everything in their drawers and closet regardless of the season... BUT for more ease in your daily life I DO suggest trying the seasonal drawers and closet idea.

The gist is that it is SOOOO much SIMPLER to be able to reach into your closet and be able to actually WEAR anything and everything you see and touch.

I confess that my personal system is pretty unsophisticated. I don't have multiple closets. Rather, I use the large padded computer bag from my first ever computer for the majority of my off season clothes. My winter coats are in the closet in my office but just about everything else fits in the bag. I place small wrapped travel soaps in between layers for freshness.

Last night I took out my "winter" bag, unzipped it, and tried everything on so I could give anything I don't want or like anymore to the rummage sale happening at our church this weekend. Summer clothes that are in good enough shape will be tucked away in the bag today.

I DO know that plenty of people really love clothes and have a lot more variety than I do... but I still suggest that you make the clothes that a) fit you, b) fit the season, and c) that you LIKE to wear- the only ones you have to look at on a daily basis.

With all best wishes, Joanna
